

ern Illinois were unprecedented for the fall season there. Warblers got an earlier start than the last couple of years in August, and "October migrants" began appearing in significant numbers in late September along the Chicago lakefront. Despite the fact that most of these species — sapsuckers, kinglets, Winter Wren, several of the sparrows had a terrible spring migration, this fall they had a good migration

There were no significant fallout days along the Lake Michigan lakefront, so high counts of passerines were generally unimpressive. Notable counts included 59 Winter Wrens at Jackson Park and 112 Tennessee Warblers at Grant Park. On the other hand, the mild fall resulted in several notably late departures, including 2 November for Swainson's Thrush, 9 December for Orange-crowned Warbler, 2 November reports Headings for species requiring IORC (Illinois Ornithological Records Committee) review in parts of Illinois or in some plumages are underlined , while those for species requiring review of all records are CAPITALIZED AND UNDERLINED . Records pending IORC review are enclosed in square brackets []. The IORC review list can be viewed at the IOS/IORC website, http://www.illinoisbirds.org/iorc.html . Noteworthy dates and sites of occurrence and remarkably high counts for the state as a whole or for particular regions of the state are underlined and boldfaced , and some further editorial remarks are boldfaced .

Remarks on the historical significance of records aim to be valid for the corpus of data published in Bohlen's 1989 Birds of Illinois and in the seasonal summaries in the Illinois journals Illinois Birds and Birding (summer 1984 - spring 1991) and Meadowlark (summer 1991 - present). Most of these remarks were supplied by Paul R. Clyne.
The 2003 DeLorme Illinois Atlas & Gazetteer has been used as a standard for spelling of place names for sites included therein.
